

I am writing to urge you not to place restrictions on local service programming of satellite radio stations. I have been very disappointed with the level of commercial interruptions, as well as limited programming options, on regular radio. For these reasons I am willing to pay for satellite radio, to which I listen for an average of perhaps 10 hours per day. I also appreciate the sound quality of satellite radio, which is far superior to regular broadcast radio. Local weather and traffic information is an important component of satellite radio and I urge you not to make satellite radio networks stop providing it.

Robert Baitty